The Burglar's Umbrella.

Among a collection of articles used by burglars when engaged in their nefarious calling is one particular contrivance that arouses great interest. In appearance it resembles a large umbrella that has seen hard service. It was formerly the property of a burglar, and it was by its means that he was able to enter the second story of a building. Removing the cover, a stick wound with ropes is revealed. The stick opens like a telescope or a jointed fishing rod. Wound round it is a rope ladder made of strong material and about thirteen feet in length. The ladder is only wide enough for one foot to be placed on the rungs. The extending stick was used to raise one end of the ladder to the window through which the operator wished to enter, and on the upper end of the ladder are two hooks to be fastened to the sill. This imitation umbrella is regarded as one of the most ingenious affairs ever made use of by a thief.—London Standard.

Took the Shilling.

A recruiting sergeant one day met an ignorant youth idling, with his hands in his pockets and standing before a house on the front of which was a notice informing the public that the building was to be sold. The notice ran thus: "To Be Sold by Private Treaty."

The sergeant approached the youth and asked him if he had ever thought of joining the army.

"Not me," was the reply. "You'd have nothing in the army worth talking about."

"Is that so?" said the other. "Well, how is it then Private Treaty has a house for sale and him only a private yet?"

The youth looked thoughtful and puzzled, and presently, over a pint of ale, the possibility of owning a house by joining the army grew into a certainty and the shilling changed hands.—London Tit-Bits.

Wonderful Animalcules.

Of all the minute creatures that inhabit this globe unseen by the naked eye there is none so astonishing, according to the Scientific American, as the little living things that live in stagnant water. They are called slipper animalcules, or, as the scientist has it, the paramcium. These tiny, invisible things develop so rapidly that if they were able to live through 350 generations they would crowd every other living thing off the face of the earth and form a mass larger than the planet itself. Should they go on reproducing until the nine hundredth generation these little creatures would form a mass large enough to crowd the moon and stars and even the sun entirely out of space. Luckily for us this is not possible, according to nature's decree. The paramcium dies after it has attained the one hundred and seventieth generation, and so the awful possibilities are checked of its multiplying to fill the universe.

The Medicine Bottle.

In order to avert the most serious thing of having a child take the wrong medicine, mothers should adhere to the following rules:

Never give medicine in the dark. Always read the label on the bottle. Never go by the color of the medicine.

When the bottle is refilled see that the label reads clear.

Keep poisons locked up. Keep all bottles locked up in a drawer or medicine chest.

Mistakes of giving children carbolic acid and such like poisons in the nighttime make it imperative that mothers study and adhere to these rules, for sometimes such inadvertent mistakes bring about terrible conclusions.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

In an English Hotel.

Proprietor (addressing porter)—Was the American pleased with his room, William?

William—Now, I wouldn't hexactly say that, sir. 'E looked as if there might be something that wasn't just to 'is liking, but I gathered from 'is remarks that 'e found it unusually comfortable.

Proprietor—Well, what did he say about it?

William—"E said it was coidder than 'ell, sir.—Judge.

A Wiseacre.

Tommy—What is an acre, dad?

"Four rods."

"What is a rod, dad?"

"Forty square rods, poles or perches."

"What is a wiseacre, dad?"

"One who keeps a spare rod, pole or perch to apply to a boy who asks useless questions. Fetch me my cane!"—London Answers.

Off the Line.

"What became of Buts' educated goat?"

"He had to dispose of it."

"What was the trouble?"

"The neighbors thought the goat was learning too many human accomplishments, and there was a crisis when the animal began to take in washing."—Augusta Herald.

Evidence.

"Was your husband a bear in Wall street?"

"I think so," replied young Mrs. Tokins. "He certainly acted like one when he got home."—Washington Star.

A Young Cynic.

Tom—They say that every woman is beautiful in some one's eyes. Do you believe it? Jack—Certainly, if you include her own.—Boston Transcript.

Manhattan Scallop.

A delicious breakfast or luncheon dish is Manhattan scallop. Shred sufficient cold cooked fish to measure a good half pint. It must be free from skin and bone. Add to it one cupful of fine stale bread crumbs, a good seasoning of salt and pepper, two well beaten eggs mixed with a half cupful of stewed tomatoes. Turn all into a buttered dish, sprinkle the top with buttered bread crumbs, dot with bits of butter and brown in a hot oven.—Surbauite.

Sizes of the Planets.

An ingenious way of comparing the sizes of planets with the sun is suggested by a French scientific writer. Let the earth, he says, be represented by a twenty franc piece; then Venus is 17 francs; Mars, 2; Mercury, 7; Uranus, 280; Neptune, 320; Saturn, 1,840; Jupiter, 6,800, and the sun 6,780,000.

A Time For Blindness.

There is sometimes a greater charity in seeming not to see our neighbor's trouble than in trying to relieve it. "Let me alone!" is the prayer of many a tortured heart when the curious, the officious and the factious force the door of its place of desolation; albeit they bring wine and oil.

Looked Like a Big Dose.

The man in bed had never been sick before. The doctor, wishing to ascertain his temperature, pointed the thermometer at him and commanded: "Open your mouth, Jim."

"Wait a minute, doc," objected the patient. "I don't b'lieve I can swallow that."—Judge.

Questions and Answers.

The time elapsing between a question and an answer is almost as important as the answer itself. It may be wisely long or short, but the longer it is the wiser must be the answer.

Let nothing shocking to eyes or ears approach those doors that close upon your child.—Juvenal.
